

Why is knowing your neighbors important?

Good relationships are important for a happy, safe, resilient neighborhood. Especially in a rural community where government services may be unavailable.

It's a good idea to exchange contact information for emergencies. And perhaps create a private neighborhood Facebook page to communicate.

It's helpful to understand:

- What are our neighbors' names and where do they live?
- Who might need help?
- What time, skills, or equipment are folks willing to share?
- Who are good leaders, advisors and workers?
- Who will enjoy more socials and who prefers solitude?
- How can we keep in touch and be the best neighbors?

Ideas on how to be Floyd Neighborly

- Be visible and friendly: Take walks or bike rides down your road and wave to people you see.

Hello 🤝 !

- Stop and chat if someone is outside. A simple "hello" goes a long way. Smiles are contagious!

- Share your bounty: If you have a garden, share your extra produce. If you bake, offer a plate of cookies.

- Consider hosting a low-key, casual gathering like a potluck, BBQ, or morning coffee. Start with just a couple of neighbors and expand from there.
- Work together to get a local church or business to host a larger gathering.

Tips...

Be friendly but not intrusive.

Respect your neighbor's space and privacy. While you want to be friendly, understand that country living often attracts people who value solitude. Some are already very busy with family and work. Understand and respect differences and diversity.

Ask about local customs and traditions: Every rural area has its own unique flavor.

Ask for local advice. How to get to know our neighbors better? Who in our neighborhood needs help or company? What services do neighbors offer? How do you grow your tomatoes?

Focus on the elderly who may have more time to spend with you and more insight to neighborhood affairs. You might be able to help them with some chores.

Topics to avoid: politics, religion, and personal finances.
